

I judged Coseley Allotments on Saturday morning

It's the first time ever I have given a 10 out of 10 for produce grown - even their chicken pen was a hotel!

All their plot was cultivated with not a weed in sight, the only down side was that they had nothing on composting. That will change as I'm doing my compost talk when I do their presentation night and I have given them 3 changes for their score sheets that will benefit the plot holders for next year.

Shallots in egg boxes, bird's eye view to pick the uniform ones out (the judge will be doing this) - by the way these are my worst ones!!!

Large onions ain't much cop this year – going to go back to using lights next year

A few more still to get up, onions washed, dried, baby lotion added

Still having trouble with the badgers - my sweetcorn is gone!

I had a bumblebee hive in between my beetroot and thought nothing of it, but the badger dug that out as well!

As I can't kill it, I shall make his ring sting instead! I have put one of my hottest chilli peppers (Carolina reaper) in the middle of some melted chocolate (my dark chocolate). This is then put in the freezer to set

Chocolate placed above hole, camera in background ready to catch his ring on fire...

Chocolate placed above hole, camera in background ready to catch his ring on fire...

