

Blue tits in one of my bird boxes on the plot, always a good sign

With the weather picking up it's time to change my compost bin's environment!

Carpet has now come off my compost bins, dont want 'em to cook!

Peas going in on the plot, nice white roots

As with everything else in my raised beds, this bed is also strawed

Getting warmed up for world naked gardening day!

Back up to heaven during the week, filled the car up with hoss muck, straw and liquid hoss muck

Eating leeks doing OK in their pots. One for myself the others for our clubs bring & buy sale

Colley Gate Gardening Club's general meeting last night, all my spare Red Ray onion sets (left of photo) went with me, these went for £2 a tray

Racked 3 jars of homemade wine during the week, most clear, giving them another month before bottling. All taste good, 2 like a sherry!

On our allotment site we still have plot holders who dig, you can see here where they have dug and brought dormant weed seeds to the surface and they have germinated, the only weeds I get will be air borne

All my blueberries on the plot which are sunk in the ground get a good watering and feed of liquid comfrey

Shallots top of the garden still doing well, these also get a good water and feed

Most of the show shallots have now been thinned down to four, these will go down to three in about a fortnights time!

Had to go shopping tonight with the Mrs! Before we went in the shopping centre I saw this manikin in the window, would be great on the plot as a scare crow, the gaffa in the shop would not oblige me!
