

Caslon kids ready for next year with free seeds donated by garden clickers!

Still trialling (!), half of my shallots going out, 5 different lots

Straw gathered up on raised bed then top dressed with biochar organic fertiliser

Shallots planted and firmed in

Straw put back around shallots and then watered

Small shallots are staying in their pots but going into the tunnel on the plot. These are going into larger buckets with the fertiliser underneath

Shallots strawed then watered

Another delivery of worm casts to our trading sheds

Pallet unloaded, then covered ready for the onslaught of winter. Our sheds shut for December, having said that I did go down yesterday as a chap wanted over £100 worth of stock

One of my pot leeks (cheers Joe), photo took Sunday afternoon

Another photo of the greenhouse today! 8oz still in cold end, leeks in heat (50 degrees fahrenheit minimum). The onion seedlings are in the propagator in the loft (photo next week).

Also put a piece on youtube... just bung in making leaf mold with mick poultney. Have an interview during the week for a new internet podcast for gardeners, I'm looking forward to that
