

Keep an eye on ya compost bins/heaps and keep 'em moist. I have 2 bits of carpet in mine (keep those moist as well) that way you will have extra worms as it's an ideal breeding ground

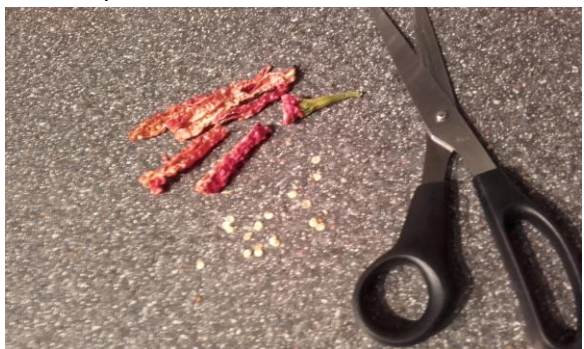

Monday is composting day for me, when chopped, mixed and added, the worms in between the two carpets are then added. All my bins now have old carpet around to stop 'em freezing

A long chilli from last year's show (Colley Gate Gardening Club)

This was dried off in the garage, then sliced open to reveal the seeds

These memory card cases are ideal for keeping seeds in, unless you have hoards of seeds!

Like gardening, I'm also trialling my cooking, for roast spuds I'm back to beef dripping

Spuds brill...I'll use an end beet joint and cook it slow...it crumbles like pulled pork. I should be in the new cook book!!

Had Colin's car washed during the week, stop him from cussin me!

Eating leeks still doing well (under enviromesh because of the allium leaf miner)

A mole hole in the path between plots, putting my camera on it to see if I can see his little face!

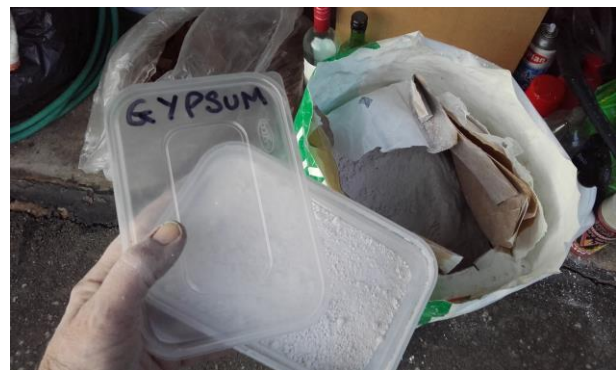

Part 2; replacing raised beds

https://www.facebook.com/pg/gardeningwithMick/photos/?tab=album&album\_id=1296477580415658

New ingredient for my compost mix!

Have a bostin xmas from the black country