

Re placing my raised beds; 3 done, filled, watered and covered

Starting on no.4 bed; another drop off of new 13ft scaffolding boards, before the scaffolders have 'em, no metal bands!

Luckily had them dry! But need to dry them off completely before covering in black and white plastic

Flog the black & white plastic down our trading sheds, good seller

This was from my talk on Thursday at Upton-upon-Severn & District Gardening Club. They loved my talk on composting...will be there again!

Potting on my garlic in the cold end of the greenhouse

Went down to Bath on Tuesday to pay Dale Toton a visit where he works, Ston Easton Park! What a set up...Peter Devonald was also there waiting for me, had a tour of the grounds where Dale works, the greenhouse set up is superb. Two good growers and two good friends, always good to meet up

This is Dale's dog "Abbey", little chap was into everything, like myself he was even into the leaf mold

Had these two heavy weight pot leeks from Dale when I visited. Got let down by two people last year with leeks...Dale you're a good 'en!

On my trip to Chris Evans' last week, I had these show pot leeks from him...another good 'en

Love me grub, roast spuds are bad for ya...you gotta die of something, may as well go happy!

Like my meat cooked an all

Juices from cooking the joint (beef dripping) are used to make the gravy (thick gravy)

Can't beat it

Still trialling in my quest for superior compost...found these on eBay; pelleted comfrey pellets, meaning I now have them all year round, they are no longer seasonal!

Had these from Gardening Naturally (4 litres)

This is still in the process of being sorted out! That's the last time I use them. If you buy anything check you get what you have paid for! If they do it to me then they can do it to many more

When the package come, it said on the weight was 3...3 what! So I measured them out, there was 2.5 litres, there should've been 4 litres.
