

Started eating the leeks now they have a bit of meat on 'em

Did a talk yesterday (Saturday 23rd) at Hillmorton & Paddox Allotment Association. They had their open day with a BBQ. In the end they had a good turnout, plus the rain kept off! They had their monies worth as I talked for 90 mins...everyone stayed!!

Their allotment site, nice and flat with 60 plots

New flag on the plot, back from hols in Mauritius; all inclusive, adults only.

Did a tour of the allotments while I was there and will do a write up in the NVS mag

Aji fantasy chillis now ripe, so I shall be bagging these up with other produce to sell at our DA meeting next week - David Thornton is our speaker

Time to get my onions up that were grown in buckets

Onions up, nice and solid

Can't get 3 to match so shall dry them off and see if they can go with the ones already lifted

4 out of 6 beds of gladioli in bloom, so much for timing!

A couple of decent gladis

While on hols one of the chefs made this from veg – impressive!

Lastly, thanks to Mick Grace for his message via the website and info on badgers i.e. that they don't seem to like garlic! Plus, another gardener has told me he piddles around his plot and has had no damage yet whereas the plot next door has – so, I'm now piddling on my path ways!
